My children are fourth generation San Juan Islands residents. They have grown up in a clean, healthy environment with a family teaching them to honor and respect their unique marine environment. My husband has been a business owner as a certified lobster while I have a teaching background. My concerns of adverse impacts of local coal transport are directly linked to the health and well being not only for my family but for the Salish Sea, marine life, bird populations and Orca residents. Who will provide adequate studies to determine the habitat and health of our local wildlife? Will ecological research be inclusive of wildlife, agriculture, pollution, contamination and... protect the ecology of our homes.
